THE PROBLEM

Policy questions are high-stakes

Answers are buried

The rule you need sits on page 47 of one of five long PDFs, worded differently from your question.

Wrong answers cost

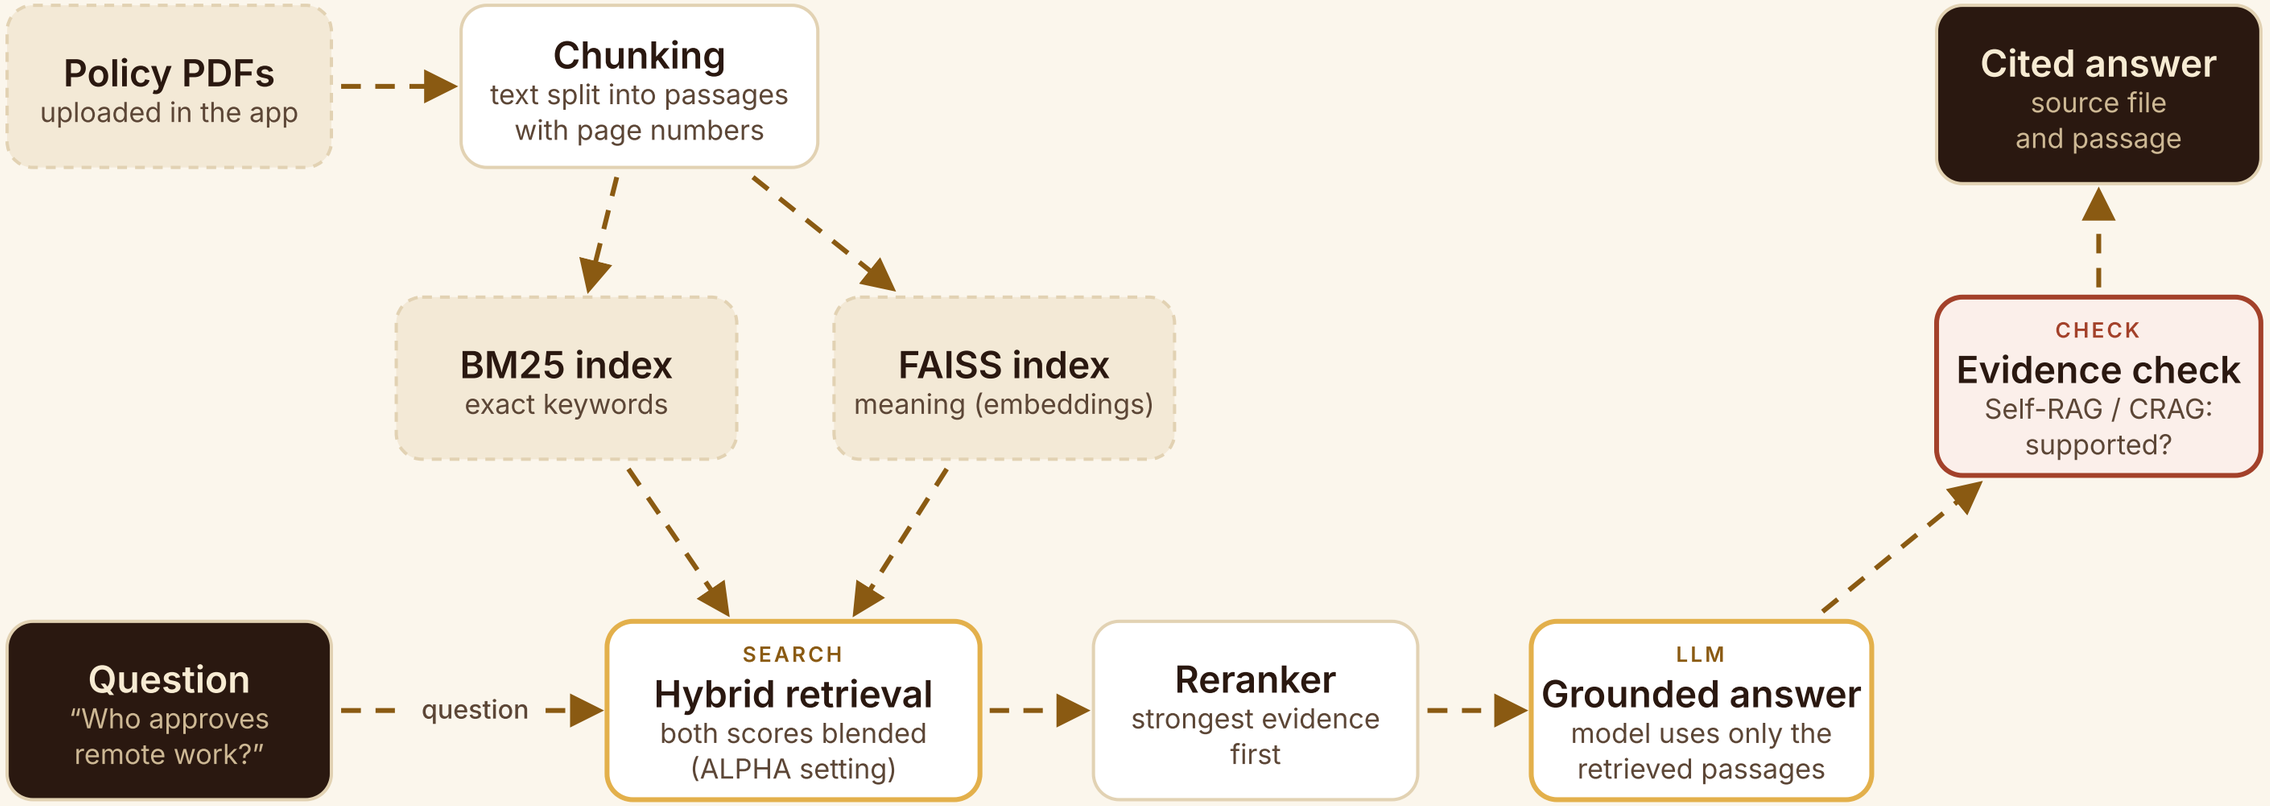

A made-up leave rule or disciplinary step creates legal and people risk.

Trust needs proof

HR and compliance teams must see exactly where an answer came from.

ARCHITECTURE

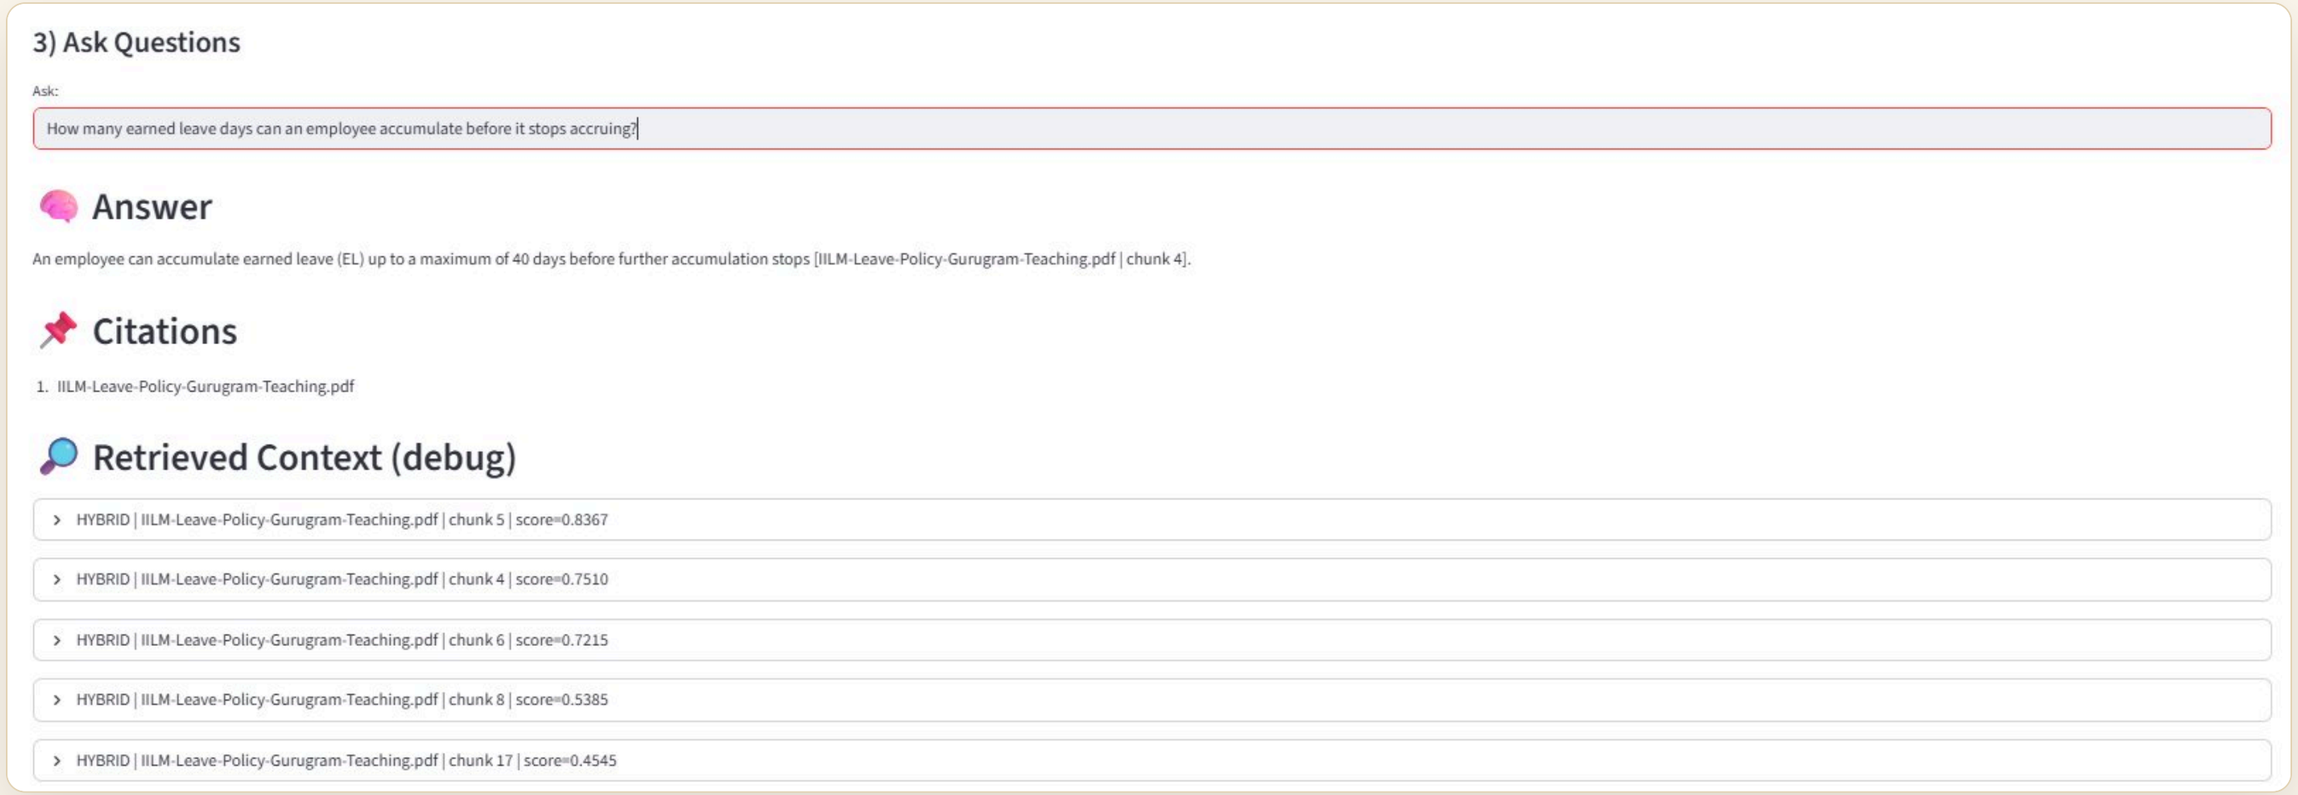

From PDF to cited answer

✓ Keyword + meaning search, reranking, a grounding check and citations: answers a compliance team can audit.

SEE IT WORKING

Answers with their evidence

A real question about earned leave. The answer names its source file and chunk, and every retrieved passage is listed with its hybrid score.

TESTED ON REAL PUBLIC DOCUMENTS

Five policies, five business questions

Document	Published by
Employee Handbook	Workable
Work From Home Policy	HR Partner
Flexible Work Policy	Dell Technologies
Code of Ethics and Conduct	U.S. Department of Labor
Diabetes in Pregnancy guideline	World Health Organization

Questions included: which actions are ethical violations and what follows; who approves remote work; which leave needs prior approval; how to report handbook inconsistencies; who has final authority when policies conflict.

ENGINEERING

Built to be checked

2
search methods combined: keyword (BM25) and meaning (FAISS)

Cited
every answer names the document and passage it came from

CI
lint, unit tests and a retrieval smoke test on every change

Layer	Technology
Reading PDFs	pypdf + pdfplumber
Search	rank-bm25 + FAISS + sentence-transformers
Answering	OpenAI with strict grounding prompts
Interface	Streamlit (live on Streamlit Cloud)

NEXT STEP

Turn your policy library into an assistant you can trust

HR handbooks, compliance manuals, SOPs, clinical guidelines, university regulations: answers in seconds, each one traceable to its source.
